A legal secretary provides administrative support and services for lawyers, solicitors and legal executives. Every law firm, financial company or barrister’s chamber requires a good legal secretary to ensure the office runs smoothly and efficiently thus enabling employers to focus on serving clients.

Legal secretaries help produce legal documents such as wills, contracts and court papers, deal with enquiries from clients, prepare court forms and statements, deliver and collect documents and attend court or police cells with solicitors.

As well as opportunities to work in solicitors’ offices or a barrister’s chamber you could also work for law courts, local authorities, estate agents or the police.

If you’re working in a small local firm you could develop experience in a wide range of legal matters, however in larger firms you will tend to specialise in one particular area of law.

The market for legal secretaries is becoming ever more competitive, and salaries will continue to increase for as long as there is a shortfall. More and more, companies are putting structured progression systems in place to ensure they keep the best staff for as long as possible.
